Clued In. Borders Out.

WHO: Australian born American bound veteran international private investigator Ken Gamble is the founder of preeminent independent global investigative consultancy Gamble Investigations International (GII).

Gamble, who recently opened a new office in the United States to further accommodate the increasing worldwide demand for his one-of-a-kind services, maintains GII offices in his native Australia, Belgium and Egypt.

WHY: Gamble, who has successfully tracked and captured some of the most elusive con artists and fugitives in the world, has emerged as a leader among an elite new breed of international private investigators that are able to meet the increased challenges of a world that is in the midst of history-making change.

From kidnapping to fraud to financial scams that total in the millions, Gamble has stayed one step ahead of the competition leaving a trail of criminals behind bars throughout the world. An expert at navigating his way through a world where political, cultural and legal differences are often as complex and dangerous as the criminals he is tracking, Gamble has assembled a team of strategic alliances that form a global network that spans across 15 countries.

Areas of expertise include clandestine operations surveillance, covert protective security, fugitive tracking, child abduction, internet and cybercrime investigations, copyright and intellectual property fraud and online scams.

WHY ELSE: Well-spoken with the rare ability to explain complex issues in relatable terms, Gamble is quickly becoming a highly sought-after expert/worldwide media source, one of the few with an unparalleled understanding of and proven-track record working in an enigmatic and oftentimes dangerous world where language, privacy laws and jurisdiction statutes change from country to country. A licensed private investigator for more than 21 years, Gamble is also a licensed Unarmed Guard, Bodyguard, Crowd Controller and Security Consultant.

WHAT: Available as a guest expert/source for media interviews to discuss breaking domestic and international news, events and relevant issues.

RECENT SUCCESSES INCLUDE:

2009 - May 11, 2009, the powerful combination of Gamble's unwavering commitment, expertise and heart resulted in the return of a young girl into her Australian mother's arms after she was kidnapped by her Egyptian father at the age of four. Gamble first learned of the case in April 2007 when the story aired on Australia's A Current Affair when he watched the segment about a fruitless effort to find and rescue a little girl kidnapped by her father and living in hiding in Egypt. Gamble knew that he not only could but had to do something to help right this tragic wrong. Gamble was retained by the show to work on the case and started a long and complex search with the desperate and heartbroken mother, which ultimately led to the rescue of her daughter.

Long after the television show had given up in late 2007, Gamble had not, providing free investigative and legal support for the mother. His dedication to the young mother and daughter and to his profession ended in a first dangerous, then beautiful reunion on the streets of Egypt that was captured on camera and recently aired on Australia's Nine Network. The leading current affairs show only became involved again after realizing that Gamble had independently located the fugitive father and his daughter.

2008 - Gamble is also the international private investigator who was responsible for tracking and exposing the mastermind behind one of the largest fraudulent international ticket rings of all time, the 2008 Beijing Olympic ticket scam that robbed people worldwide of millions of dollars.

Gamble, who is considered by industry experts as a mastermind himself at cybercrime investigations, had been tracking the criminal organization since 2003 and utilized some of the world's most sophisticated tracking resources to expose the British based group that maintained more than 150 online ticketing websites.
